

The ceramic and glass tiles are made using a layering process. As each layer of color or material is applied, the tiles are fired in a kiln fusing them into a deep texture.

Due to this process, slight variation in color and size is typical. The tiles are intalled using screws.